Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) Between International Labour Organization (ILO) And United Nations Children’s Fund (UNICEF)

The International Labour Organization (ILO), represented by the International Labour Office, and the United Nations Children’s Fund (UNICEF), having regard to, the Joint Letter by the ILO Director-General and the Executive Director of the UNICEF, signed on 3 July 2019, are determined to develop and further strengthen existing cooperation in order to advance common priorities.

Both parties agree to systematize their collaboration to enhance effectiveness of their programmes and avoid duplication in order to strengthen efforts towards promoting the equitable acquisition of age-appropriate skills, competencies and qualifications for all people throughout their lives and enhancing people’s capacity to make use of the opportunities available for decent work including entrepreneurship.

The ILO and the UNICEF reaffirm their commitment to work together to mutually reinforce and strengthen the work programmes of their respective organizations within their mandate and according to their comparative advantage, country needs and complementarity with in-country partners. The ILO and UNICEF also reaffirm their commitment to support Member States in the overall achievement of the internationally agreed development goals, including the Sustainable Development Goals, in particular Goals 4 (quality education and lifelong learning for all) and 8 (Sustainable economy growth, full and productive employment and decent work for all).

The parties agree to develop their cooperation as follows:

I. Relevant Organizational Mandates and Approaches

1. ILO
Guided by the Human Resource Development Convention, 1975 (No. 142), the Human Resources Development Recommendation, 2004 (No. 195) and the ILO Centenary Declaration for the Future of Work, 2019, the ILO directs its efforts to promoting skills and lifelong learning for all workers throughout their working lives as a joint responsibility of governments and social partners. The ILO supports its member States to establish effective skills and lifelong learning systems with a view to strengthening the capabilities of all people, leaving no one behind, and supporting them through multiple transitions. The ILO’s support aims to help people benefit from the opportunities of a changing world of work by focusing on the following areas:

a. Promoting innovative solutions for skills and lifelong learning by ideating, developing and testing new solutions to tackle key skills challenges;
b. Understanding current and future skills needs through anticipating and planning skills demand and supply, and monitoring skills mismatch;
c. Promoting effective skills development systems through policies and strategies, governance structures and resources for skills development;
d. Promoting the development of foundation skills and core skills for employability;

e. Enabling multiple learning pathways by designing and developing flexible training programs;

f. Supporting certification of learning through the validation and recognition of prior informal, non-formal learning;

g. Ensuring quality of training through quality assurance and regulatory arrangements for skills development;

h. Supporting transitions to and within the labour market by providing career and vocational guidance, delivering pre-vocational training and providing employment services;

i. Improving the quality and relevance of work-based learning including upgrading informal apprenticeships, and introducing quality apprenticeships.

j. Broadening access to training programs and services through skills development for social inclusion;

k. Enhancing social dialogue on skills and lifelong to strengthen the linkage between skills development and industry, while addressing the needs of all people.

2. UNICEF

Under UNICEF’s Strategic Plan (2018-2021), and ‘Every Child Learns’ – UNICEF’s Education Strategy (2019-2030), UNICEF adopts three core strategies for education and skills development while acknowledging that needs will differ significantly according to country context. Within these strategies, UNICEF focuses on the most marginalized, including the extreme poor, girls, ones in humanitarian situations, displaced and refugee communities, ones with disabilities, ethnic and linguistic minorities by:

a. supporting quality formal primary education and secondary education;

b. strengthening and expanding non-formal education and alternative delivery models (e.g., catch-up classes, bridging and accelerated education, second-chance education, skills training and apprenticeships) that aim to maintain or bridge children and adolescents back to the formal education system and/or provide other accredited learning opportunities that will enable them to access improved labour market opportunities. Indicative interventions to improve the employability of marginalised young people include:

   o supporting the inclusion of alternative learning programmes in education sector plans to ensure that they are costed and budgeted for, thus ensuring sustainability.

   o providing integrated packages (skills bundle\(^1\) with necessary wrap-around services to ensure acquisition of market-relevant skills and smoother transition) through multiple pathways and modalities for marginalized young people and supporting effective and gender-responsive pedagogical approaches.

   o strengthening business engagement in secondary education to enhance relevance to labour market needs;

\(^1\) UNICEF prioritizes foundational and transferable skills. We will also work on digital skills and on job-specific skills for marginalized adolescents and according to country needs, UNICEF comparative advantage and fit with in-country partners.
o strengthening non-formal education and training systems and coherence with formal education and training systems;
  o strengthening skills assessment and certification (i.e. transferable skills, non-formal education and training, Recognition of Prior Learning, informal apprenticeship, etc.);
  o providing support to the most marginalized to participate in skills-based programmes.

  c. advancing adolescent girls’ secondary education, learning and skills development (including in science, technology, engineering and mathematics [STEM]), as part of the UNICEF Gender Action Plan targeted priorities; this is complemented by cross-sectoral work on Ending Child Marriage (ECM), harmful social norms and ending violence against children including School-Related Gender-Based Violence (SRGBV).

To further address transitions to decent work, UNICEF partners with others to ensure continuity of services as young people transition from childhood into adulthood. It works with partners beyond the education sector to strengthen provision of services that connect young people to work such as employment services, career guidance and job matching services. In case such services are not available and key partners are not present, as for example in many humanitarian contexts, UNICEF might choose to fill the gap and engage directly to ensure continuity of services for the most vulnerable young people.

II. Programmatic Principles

1. Both parties commit to the following programming principles to guide their cooperation:
   - holistic approaches to learning and skills development which aims at fostering life outcomes, such as life-long learning, employability, personal empowerment and active citizenship;
   - skills development as a key element of promoting life-long learning as a human centred, dynamic, progressive, and cumulative process from early childhood through adolescence to adulthood;
   - promoting human rights of all learners;
   - gender-responsive at a minimum, aware of gender norms, roles and relations, and promote measures and approaches to actively reduce their harmful effects, including gender inequality;
   - inclusive, accessible and contextualized to all adolescents and youth regardless of ability, ethnicity, linguistic, social, or economic status, including refugees, migrants, and conflict-affected children and youth;
   - relevant, aligning both with national priorities, the labour market, and the needs of adolescents and communities while considering local culture and context;
   - evidence-based, using how children and adolescents learn and grow, determining what works and lessons drawn from previous interventions about what works, and through robust research, monitoring and evaluation, generating evidence to contribute to advancing the field, paying attention to and addressing underlying gender inequalities in interactions and learning – particularly with regards to girls, and those of diverse gender identities;
   - participatory approaches that enable young people’s participation, building their capacity for meaningful participation and including their voice in the design, implementation, assessment and governance of programmes; with particular focus on recognizing and addressing how underlying gender inequalities influence participation;

- responsive to emergencies, adopting a conflict-sensitive approach and recognizing the role of skills development in reducing the harmful effects of emergencies on young people’s wellbeing and development as well as their role in promoting more peaceful, stable societies and encouraging social cohesion, reconciliation and peacebuilding.
- innovative, harnessing the power of different technologies and innovations to support improved access, delivery, and monitoring of skills development programmes in an equitable manner.
- based on social dialogue with governments, employers and workers to develop solutions that address local labour market needs.

Annex 1: Alignment between the Global Initiative on Decent Jobs for Youth and Generation Unlimited

1. Objective of this document

The Global Initiative on Decent Jobs for Youth (DJY) was endorsed by the UN Chief Executives Board for Coordination in November 2015 and launched in February 2016. Generation Unlimited (GenU) is a global multi-sector partnership supported by over fifty (50) heads of state, international agencies, private sector corporations, young leaders, civil society organizations and philanthropies partners. GenU was launched at the 73rd Session of the UN General Assembly in September 2018 alongside Youth 2030: the United Nations Strategy on Youth.

The two initiatives share a common vision to improve the livelihood situation and future prospects of young people around the world. Both initiatives aspire towards multi-stakeholder engagement.

As provided for under Section III. 1 of the Memorandum of Understanding between the ILO and UNICEF, the objective of this Annex is to facilitate an improved alignment between the ILO’s and UNICEF’s respective work within the two initiatives to scale up action and impact on youth employment and advocate for better access of young people to decent work and to maximize results and impact through coordinated action and communication. It seeks to:

- Clarify the scope of work and complementarities of DJY and GenU
- Clarify the initiatives’ positioning, including in the context of their governance structures
- Describe protocols for communication and messaging at global and country levels
- Outline possible areas of joint technical work at global and country levels
- Describe protocols for joint resource mobilization
- Establish and leverage governance arrangements to ensure continuity of an agreed areas of alignment.

2. Scope, partners and governance

History:

- In 2014, the UN High-level Committee on Programme requested the ILO to lead the drafting of the DJY strategy and subsequently, as per the Chief Executives Board-endorsed strategy of 2015, the ILO became the permanent Chair of the DJY initiative, in charge of leading its set up and operationalization.
- In 2018, UNICEF led the launch of GenU with public-private sector partners and currently serves as the host of GenU secretariat (the “GenU Global Executive Team”) at the global level which provides administrative and fiduciary support, pursuant to its mandate as the global agency of the United Nations, advancing children’s rights as guided by the Convention on the Rights of the Child.

Partners:

- As an umbrella initiative, DJY facilitates a broad and inclusive membership drawn from 10 engagement groups, namely: governments, private sector, social partners, youth organizations and civil society, UN system, media, regional and multilateral organizations, foundations, parliamentarians, and the academia. Partners join DJY through action-oriented commitments, i.e. they pledge resources, youth employment projects, or knowledge outputs as means to advance the objective of the partnership.

- GenU’s multi-sector partnership is comprised of partners across governments, civil society, international organizations, the private sector, and young people. Partners join GenU by invitation and serve in one of the governing bodies of GenU- the Board of Trustees and the Global Leadership Council, or the Leaders or Champions groups- based on their position and interest.

Governance:

- Both DJY and GenU adhere to their respective governance structures.
- DJY is chaired by the ILO and assisted by a secretariat hosted by the ILO. Strategic advice is provided by a team of seven UN entities, namely: FAO, UNFPA, UNWOMEN, UNIDO, UNDP and UNEP.
- GenU is governed by its Board of Trustees and the Global Leadership Council and is actively supported by appointed “Leaders” and “Champions” from around the world. GenU is supported by the GenU Global Executive Team hosted by UNICEF.

Scope of work:

- DJY’s objective is to facilitate increased impact and expanded country-level action on decent jobs for youth (young people aged 15-29) through multi-stakeholder partnerships, the dissemination of evidence-based policies and the scaling up of effective and innovative interventions.
- GenU’s objective is to help young people (ages 10-24) become productive and engaged members of society, by connecting Secondary Education and Training to Employment and Entrepreneurship, through public-private partnerships and co-creation with young people. GenU takes a two-pronged approach to its work—seeking to coordinate country level action through investment agendas and leverage its scale to implement cross-cutting global breakthroughs.

3. Common elements

DJY and GenU focus on the following areas:

- Youth employability (secondary education, skills development)
- Youth transitions into decent work (quality apprenticeships, labour market intermediation measures)
- Youth entrepreneurship and self-employment (value chain development, business development services)
- Decent work for youth with special attention being paid to the quantity and quality of jobs and across key target groups, including youth in the rural economy and those in fragile situations, as well as decent jobs in key economic segments, such as the green and digital economies
- Youth engagement and participation (protection of human rights, promotion of voice, representation, ability to organize, civil engagement)

Approach and interventions:

Within their respective roles at DJY and GenU the ILO and UNICEF will collaborate to

- Facilitate and leverage multi-stakeholder partnerships at global, regional and country-level
- Focus on action at country level
- Develop context-specific and global knowledge products
- Pilot, screen and support the scaling up of impactful interventions
- Promote the active involvement of young people in fora and policy formulation processes
- Broker and promote shared value partnerships with the private sector

Partners:

The ILO and UNICEF will use their reasonable efforts to inform partners of both initiatives about the scope of this Annex.

4. Improving synergies

Knowledge development and dissemination (Knowledge Facility):

- The ILO and UNICEF will encourage DJY and GenU to use the Decent Jobs for Youth Knowledge Facility as the one-stop-shop for action resources for both partnerships and their members to learn, share, and engage on youth education, skills, decent work, entrepreneurship and engagement through curated tools, data and resources. The ILO and UNICEF will encourage both initiatives to maintain and expand the Facility while ensuring relevance of content for all partners and target audience. If approved by DJY and GenU, the Knowledge Facility will be co-branded to reflect its identity as a joint collaboration of DJY and GenU.
- Upon availability of resources, the ILO and UNICEF will encourage DJY and GenU to select one or two global knowledge products and/or events to be jointly produced, published, and organized per year. Each initiative will take the lead on topics that directly connect to their mandate as well as the level of expertise of the host organization and of its partners.
- The ILO and UNICEF will encourage DJY and GenU to collaborate in the formulation of a country-level research agenda to avoid duplication in the implementation of both initiatives.
- Thematic leadership: DJY may lead on issues related to skills for decent jobs, transitions to decent work, full and productive employment and decent work, youth entrepreneurship and self-employment, and labour rights and voices of youth in the world of work as approved by
DJY. On the other hand, GenU may take the leadership on issues related to secondary education and skills and young people’s participation and civic engagement as approved by GenU.

Country level technical advice, action and leadership:

- The ILO and UNICEF will seek advice from the initiatives’ secretariats and the respective partners within the initiatives regarding which countries are selected for cooperation, rules of engagement, and responsibilities and resources available. The ILO and UNICEF will continue to leverage their infrastructure in order to support the initiatives.

- A leading role in a particular country implies that the leading initiative (and corresponding host entity) will be the convener of public-private partners at country level. Any allocation of funds by ILO and UNICEF will be subject to the respective policies, rules and procedures of the ILO and UNICEF. The ILO and UNICEF will consult their respective partners and secretariats of DJY and GenU as regards to the allocation of financial resources for agreed joint activities.

- The ILO and UNICEF within their respective roles at DJY and GenU will strive for advancing national high-level advocacy to realize the common vision of both initiatives of boosting secondary education and skills, decent jobs for youth, self-employment and young people’s participation and civic engagement.

- Detailed guidance on technical and/or operational matters with regard to each agreed joint project will have to be jointly agreed by the DJY and GenU in accordance with their respective governance structure, taking into account the leading or co-leading role of one of the initiatives;

- Any joint communication strategy will have to be approved by DJY and GenU to ensure that the alignment of the two initiatives is well understood and to promote their collaboration and growth.

Joint Resource Mobilization:

The ILO and UNICEF will assist the initiatives in developing joint fundraising plans to support joint global and country level activities. Awareness raising and communication activities on resource mobilization will facilitate the initiatives’ synergies with the efforts of other organizations and demonstrate collaboration and coordination to donors.

Communication and messaging

- Joint communiques and products will bear the brands of both initiatives and reflect their branding guidelines if and as approved by DJY and GenU. The use of an initiative’s verbal or visual identity by the other initiative will require prior written authorization of such initiative.

- The ILO and UNICEF within their respective roles at DJY and GenU will seek to ensure common narrative and messages in the joint products of the initiatives. In the event of a disagreement in narrative or messages, the ILO and UNICEF will seek a common ground, or opt for deleting the text in contention.

- At country level, all joint communications and messaging involving DJY and GenU will require approval by DJY and GenU.
